The African Corporate Governance Network, ACGN, today signed a memorandum of understanding with the African Stock Exchange Association, ASEA. This, the parties said, is aimed at promoting best corporate governance practices in organizations across Nigeria and Africa at large.

The signing of the agreement took place after the bi-annual Executive Committee meeting of ACGN hosted by the Institute of Directors, IoD, Nigeria at the Eko Hotel and Suites, the first time such meeting will hold in the West African sub-region.

Speaking with newsmen after the signing, Oscar Onyema, chief executive officer of the Nigerian Stock Exchange, NSE, who signed on behalf of ASEA, described the development as a dream come true, as both parties have been making efforts to collaborate for over one year. Onyema, who is also the president of ASEA, expressed optimism that the collaboration would yield positive results for every party.

Jane Vallis, chief executive officer, Mauritius Institute of Directors, who signed on behalf of the ACGN, said that both associations will work together to ensure that ethical leadership and good corporate governance practices are adhered to in companies. She noted that the ethics of corporate governance is very essential for the sustenance of growth in organisations.

While speaking as the guest speaker at a business forum earlier held during the meeting, Deon Rossouw, chief executive officer of the Ethics Institute of South Africa, urged the directors to always act in the best interest of their organizations and to take legitimate interests and expectations of stakeholders into account in strategy determination. Rossouw maintained that these and other ethical conducts would
